On a count of 1-10, how many English words do you know: ____

Please answer the following questions:

Check all English phrases you know

- I don't know
- This counter is closed
- If it is not on shelves it's not available
- The stock will come tomorrow

Which of the following words may belong to English? (You don't need to know the meaning or ever use them)

- Please
- Excuse me
- Thank you
- You are welcome

If a customer tries to buy an inferior quality product, you should:

- Not mention the better product
- Jack up the prices of rest of the items because he is stupid anyway
- Show the product to the salesperson at next counter, say something in Punjabi and laugh out loud
- Tell the customer the product is on same and make him buy more

What would you do in the following scenario? You are busily walking and a customer asks where something is.

- Walk faster
- Tell the customer, "Please wait here" and never come back as a lesson not to interrupt busy people
- Pretend you don't work at the store and walk past
- Tell him "Top-shelf, next isle", no matter what the customer is asking for, even if it is the restrooms.

What is the best response to "Thank you"?

- Frown
- Stare
- No expression
- Shouting at the top of the lungs, "NEXT CUSTOMER IN LINE"

After bagging customer's groceries, the tomatoes should be:

- Under potatoes
- Under the bag of rice
- Under the gallon milk bottle
- Forgotten on the counter

If the customer points out you shortchanged him ...

- You must never apologize. They got the change they deserved
- Argue the change was correct
- Give him the "thrifty bastard" look
- Shortchange again to see how low the customer would stoop for 20 cents

When the price for an item doesn't ring up, you should

- Make the price up
- Ask the customer to go check
- Since it will take too long to check, quietly leave the item out
- Ask the salesperson at the next counter, which is a cue for them to make the price up

The default expression on your face is

- Sulk
- Like you have a bad hangover
- PMS-face
- Like you sat on a jelly fish on a nude beach

Which of the following is a definitive sign that the customer wants to have sex with you?

- He says, "Hi, How you doin'"
- He makes eye contact
- He doesn't make eye contact
- Customer's mere presence in the store
